

Peaceful nuclear explosions will certainly contribute importantly in many fields in the years ahead. The benefits of this technology—now accessible to only a few nations—will also certainly be widely available to many other countries as a consequence of the nonproliferation treaty.