Dear Ted:

I have read your article with mixture of dismay that such a thing has happened and admiration for your fortitude. At the same time it has its ridiculous aspect. You are cast in the role of Saint Sebastian but instead of the arrows you were on the receiving end of one custard pie after another pitched by pack of sly, self-seeking, savage clowns who then yelled-- You're not very clean, you know.

I must also confess that I groaned when I hefted your article, but when I began to read it I couldn't put it down. I hope that it will be published.

Sincerely yours,

Bill
