Dr. Edward A. Gall, vice president and director of the University of Cincinnati Medical Center, stated today that members of the University faculty have expressed interest in the matter of whole body radiation therapy studies for patients with advanced cancer at the Cincinnati General Hospital.

Explanatory statements have been issued subsequent to recent publicity given the project. It should be understood that the entire investigation has been undergoing examination and that since early November a committee of knowledgeable members of the faculty has been carrying out a critical review of the program.

The committee comprises individuals from a number of disciplines and includes representatives of the non-medical campus faculty.

This committee is involved in determining all aspects of the study including its scientific content, experimental design, treatment and evaluation of data, ethical aspects and medical results. It will shortly make its conclusions known to President Warren Bennis.
