

In recognition of Los Alamos National Laboratory's 70 years of service to the nation

This MC4531 neutron generator represents more than six decades of close collaboration between Los Alamos and Sandia national laboratories. Built at Sandia, the MC4531 will be used in the Los Alamos-designed W88 submarine-launched ballistic missile warhead, a mainstay of the U.S. nuclear deterrent.

July 23, 2013